The January/February issue of THE BARNES REVIEW is a very special issue of THE BARNES REVIEW. Why? There aren't many magazines anywhere — maybe we should say "there aren't any magazines anywhere" — that would take the position that Adolf Hitler, rather than being a monstrous mass murderer, was in fact a hero to his people.

Well, TBR takes that position, without hesitation and with no apology. And the reason for that is that no apology is necessary. The truth is on TBR's side and — as the wide-ranging material in this issue clearly demonstrates — the truth about Hitler and Third Reich Germany (both from a domestic standpoint and within the context of Germany's role in global affairs prior to and during World War II) is far different from what has been painted by the mass media and academia.

There's much more to the story than just "the Holocaust" — that recurring mantra to which we are subjected on a relentless basis (and which TBR quite regularly addresses from a Revisionist standpoint, much to the dismay of those who worship at the altar of the Holocaust Industry) — and this issue of TBR tries to fill in some of the many missing pieces of the puzzle in the bigger picture.

That's why we are so enthusiastic about this particular "theme" issue: It underscores the critical need for honest reporting about the people and events in history that have brought us to where we are today.

So we are especially interested in hearing from potential readers about what we have presented in the pages of this issue — the first issue of volume 20. It is entirely unlike anything they'll have ever read in any mainstream magazine, newspaper or textbook. And that's precisely what TBR's underlying message is all about: Bringing history into accord with the facts and tearing down the wall of lies about history.

To get a copy of this issue for $10, send payment to TBR, P.O. Box 15877, Washington, D.C. 20003 or call 1-877-773-9077 toll free to charge. If you decide to subscribe to TBR after reviewing the issue, we will take $10 off the subscription price of $46 (U.S.) and send you all new issues as they are published (five more issues) for 2014!
